

I understand that telemarketers have to make a living to, but why should they be allowed to call me in the privacy of my own home and bother me when it could be someone selling aluminum siding when i rent. This is a basic example but my point is this. I have been sick for a couple of weeks about 2 years ago and phone calls from my wife and my Dr are the only calls i consider important at that time. Because of their constant nagging, i not only did not get any rest but stop answering the phone completely and missed the calls i should have gotten, my wife and my Dr. My wife then rushed home thinking the worst had happened. I am sure that if this happened to anyone at FCC they would think a little diferently about taking away our new found peace.
